SETTING THE SCENE

Huge corporate events may be effective team-building exercises, but they can leave the environment dealing with a carbon hangover of rock-star proportions. Audiovisual presentations, conferences, exhibitions and parties can suck up fossil fuels like thirsty delegates at an open bar. But event-staging company Scene Change is about to turn the tables on that.

Scene Change is so passionate about contributing to a sustainable business environment that the company doesn't pass a surcharge of the cost of purchasing carbon offsets onto its clients. It also offers clients the option to choose more environmentally-friendly equipment for their events from LED lighting to LCD displays.

"We want to give people a chance to run a show that isn't adding to the problem," says Scene Change director Ian Whitworth. Visit www.scenechange.com.au.
